

Bird's Eye View

By MARTLET

We Note With Approval . . .

The Daily is big-hearted. We always like to encourage struggling enterprise. We are not averse to giving a lesser contemporary a helping hand.

Therefore, it is without any trace of condescension in our manner that we commend to your attention this week's edition of that rising young newspaper, the Montreal Standard.

This week's rotogravure section contains snaps of college life. Four whole pages are being devoted to the McGill campus. On the cover there is a picture of a beautiful co-ed. Need we say that she isn't at McGill? There are pictures of the Red and White Revue, of this year's version of the perennial Arts vs. Engineering struggle, with snow-balls and hoses well in the foreground, and of various minor items of local interest.

Buy this week's Standard, one dime, ten cents, pay no more. Available at all newsstands.

Professional Rivalry.

It is often felt that the Medical students are too secluded from the facts of campus life. This year, we have made efforts to find out just what was going on in that mysterious building on Pine Street, but our spies have met with little success. All seemed quiet on the Medical front.

At last, however, one of the Meds broke down and confessed that all was not well among the sawbone fraternity. There exists a deadly rivalry between Third and Fourth Year Medicine. When the Third was getting its class picture taken for the Annual, Fourth interrupted the proceedings with a shower of snow-balls. Nevertheless, the picture was finally taken. But when Fourth Year was posing for its picture, Third sought revenge with such enthusiasm that the picture had to be postponed.

Now the Medical Undergraduates Society is holding its elections, and both Third and Fourth Years have put up candidates for the Presidency. We await with interest the result of election day.

Lost—An Election.

We wish to deplore the poor sportsmanship displayed by some individual who smuggled the notice entitled "Lost—An Election" into the columns of the Daily. We need not add that the Daily staff was entirely unaware of the manoeuvre. Dark and devious ways were employed by this dark (?) and devious individual. A nefarious scheme, sir!

Fasthead.

Now the Daily is over, we won't take a mean advantage by assailing the various minor columnists who've assailed us during the year, because a lot of nice things were said about us at the banquet. At least, Martlet is appreciated.

A lot of celebrities were present at the grand affair. There was L. S. B. Shapiro. He gave a lot of good advice. Which reminds us of a story. When L. S. B. Shapiro was reporter on the Daily (or so the story runs), he once sat up until five in the morning trying to finish a story.

But we shan't go on with these melancholy reflexions. They make feel very very old.

Good Advice.

We conclude with some pieces of good advice for our most constant readers, R.V.C.:

A heel has been defined as woman's sole remaining pedestal.

REFORD TROPHY CONTEST WON BY LEO ROBACK

Upholds Negative of 'Riches Grow in Hell'

FOUR VIE FOR CUP

Winner Ascribes Success to Application of Sociological Sciences

Leo Roback, having won the Reford Challenge Cup last night told the Daily in an interview that he won his point simply by applying the sociological sciences to prove his argument.

His task was to uphold the negative of the resolution that "riches grow in Hell" a quotation from Milton. His colleague was Bill MacNaughton, while Horace Baugh and Montague Berger upheld the affirmative of the resolution. Although the debate took the form of a clash between two sides composed of two men each, the judging was of each individual speaker.

The debate was opened by Horace Baugh, who stated that, although he is a theological student who, therefore, would be qualified to talk on the nethermost regions, he would base his argument not only on theological but also on practical considerations. He said that wealth is composed of four elements, land, goods, money and property, which he referred to as "the soil of the hot-bed of Hell." He said that money speaks, and that the primary topic of the conversation of a great many people is wealth. This causes people to set material gain as their goal, "In striving for wealth," he said, "we lose sight of the pearl of real value."

Riches Are Tyrants.

Riches are tyrants, he said, although they sing "Britons never shall be slaves," the English people are slaves to wealth. Money is the modern god, spelled with a small "g." He remarked that "when the pocket expands, the heart contracts."

He said that riches separate friends, and that this surely is not divine. This led to his argument that riches grew in Hell. Milton meant in "Paradise Lost" that riches should be placed at the lower end of the list of worldly possessions. Poets know the human heart, they are seers, and we should take it from them. "And so, in conclusion, I firmly state with Milton that riches grow in Hell."

Roback States Case.

From the foregoing conclusion Leo Roback, the winner of the cup, said he was placed in an embarrassing situation in contesting Baugh's arguments, since he would automatically be refuting Milton. He claimed that the affirmative side took too narrow a viewpoint of the subject. Riches are composed not only of what Baugh said they were, but also of all things that go to enrich the lives of human beings. He argued that his opponent did not prove that riches grow in Hell but that he showed that the converse is true, that Hell grows in (Continued on Page Six)

Last Philosophy Club Meeting on Thursday

"Collectivism and the Individual" will be the topic under discussion at the next meeting of the Philosophical Society taking place on Thursday, March 23, in Room B of Strathcona Hall. Charles Lipton will address the meeting on the subject in question. During the discussion, several problems raised in the University series of talks "The State and Society" will be considered.

Charles Lipton, president of the Society, will open the discussion which will consider the implications for individual liberty in the present tendency toward increased state or collectivist action. Concerning this question, there are several schools of thought. One school calls all state power as an encroachment on personal liberty; another states that individual liberty is meaningless without considering the context of the state. Still another school, notable among the democracies, holds that state power is necessary.

These three schools of thought, those who believe in individual liberty, those who claim that individual liberty is worthless, and that school claiming that the state is all-important will be illustrated in the discussion on Thursday next.

After the discussion an election will be held at this meeting for the officers of next year.

SPRING REGISTRATION WILL BE CONTINUED

Spring Registration will be continued this year, Dean Hendel has announced, since the system was so successful last April. All students are required to register for the session 1939-40 on the afternoons of April 11th to 14th inclusive. Students intending to take honours must fill out two special forms available at the Dean's Office.

The reason for this Spring Registration, according to Dean Hendel, is to allow students ample opportunity to consult their professors and the heads of departments. In this way the faculty are able to discuss the students' difficulties and help him make plans for the coming year.

Those students who fail to comply with these regulations will find that their final marks will be delayed. Everyone is therefore asked to co-operate with the University in this respect.

Students are permitted to make any changes they wish in the usual September registration.

PRE-MEDS HEAR DEAN FLEMING

Adds Meeting in Union on Monday

Last Gathering of Society This Year; Subject Is Public Health

Dr. Grant Fleming, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, will address the Pre-Medical Society on Monday at 8 p.m. This meeting, which is the last to be held this year, will take place in the Music Room of the Union. The address will concern some aspects of Public Health and will be followed by a general discussion period.

The speaker is actively interested in the subject of public health. He is the author of several books and pamphlets on medicine, including many articles on health topics. For many years he has been associated with several organizations for the promotion of public health.

Dr. Fleming is a graduate of Toronto University where he received the degree of M.B. in 1907. A year later he was appointed bacteriologist of the department of Public Health at Toronto. In 1928 he received his M.D. degree.

FORGE GOES ON SALE WITHIN TWO WEEKS

"The Forge," McGill University's only undergraduate magazine, has now gone to press and is expected to be available in two weeks. "The Forge" was started last year under the Editorship of Judith Kennedy, and this year's Managing Board hopes that it may continue in years to come.

This issue of the magazine contains four stories, five poems, and numerous articles and essays. Among those contributing to this issue are Jeanette Scholnick, Margaret Clare, Ernest Carter and Stephen Leacock, Jr., and Kay Gurd.

The Managing Board of this Year's Forge consists of Glyn Owen, editor-in-chief; Margaret Clare, feature editor; John Colby, distribution manager; Katherine Gurd, art editor; and George McDonald, business manager.

The Board wish to announce that subscriptions are available from any of the executive or at the Tuck Shop for 25 cents each.

CALL NOMINATION OF ARTS EXECUTIVE

As the college season hits into the home stretch, nominations are being called for the election of officers to the Arts Undergraduate Society. All nominations must be signed by ten bona fide members of the Arts Undergraduate Society and must be in the hands of George McDonald, Secretary of the Society, by two o'clock Friday, March 17.

In the election to be held on Tuesday, March 21, a president, vice-president, treasurer and secretary of the Arts Undergraduate Society are to be elected. One of the regulations governing the election of executive officers states that the president must be a member of the Third Year, the vice-president a member of the Second Year, the treasurer a Third Year student, and the secretary is to come from the Freshman Class.

STUDENT TALKS ON HERODOTUS

Harry Simkover Discusses 'Herodotus, Story Teller'

Classical Club Holds Final Meeting—Elects Officers

"Herodotus the Story Teller" was the subject of an address given by Harry Simkover at the closing meeting of the Classical Society yesterday.

Simkover, an honours student in Greek and Philosophy, pointed out that only in recent times has the "Father of History" become generally recognized as a true historian. But whether Herodotus was recognized as a true historian or condemned as the "Father of Lies," his reputation for story telling has never been challenged. Even Plutarch admitted that Herodotus could write and that his tales charmed and seduced everybody.

Types of Stories.

Simkover classified the stories of Herodotus into six categories—romances, tales from folk-lore, moralizing and fairy tales, oriental professional tales, and legends. He subdivided the legends into tales from mythology, tales explanatory of history and institutions, and anecdotes concerning famous historical characters.

The speaker illustrated the majority of these types with readings and selected the story of Hippocleides, "the first historical jester," as one typical of Herodotus' romances.

New Executive.

The elections were held and the executive for next year will be as follows:

Honorary president, Mr. E. M. Counsell; president, Malcolm N. Davies; vice-president, Stanley A. Smith; secretary, Marjorie Simpson; treasurer, Gerald McGowan; reporter, Harry Simkover.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS

More Co-eds Needed to Make Up Team

Concluding this year's session of the Bridge Club, an annual Student-Professor bridge match will be held this Saturday. Since there are not yet enough entries from co-eds in order to make up a full team, the executive wish to announce that all those interested may sign up immediately. Names may be left with Jean Gilmour, Charlie Gale, or with Doug Fullerton in the Union.

COMMERCIAL ELECTIONS

Society Announces New Executive Officers

The Commercial Society announced yesterday results of the elections of executive officers held in the Arts Building yesterday. Commerce students voting from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. elected the following executive:

President . . . . . Keith Buckland
Vice-President . . . . . Stuart Wright
Secretary . . . . . Joe Hodgson
Treasurer . . . . . Bill Stronach
Athletic Manager . . . . . A. Decelles
Of the above A. Decelles was elected to the position of Athletic Manager by acclamation.

DAILY SUSPENDS PUBLICATION

With today's issue the McGill Daily suspends publication until May 25. On that date, a special eight-page edition will be published featuring articles appropriate to Convocation and to the Royal Visit to Canada. Copies will be mailed to the home addresses of all out-of-town students.

Zatz Wins Talbot-Papineau Cup In Debate Finals Last Night

Alex Stalker Fails to Defeat Resolution, that Beer Be Prohibited From Advertising in this Province

The victor of the Talbot-Papineau Trophy Competition held last night in the Union was Solomon Zatz, who successfully upheld the resolution "That the Advertising of Beer on the Radio Should be Prohibited by Law." Zatz succeeded in defeating 19 contestants in Tuesday's preliminaries. Opposing the resolution was Alex Stalker, a member of the standing committee, whose arguments ran a very close second to Zatz. Howard Minogue was in the chair, while judges were Guy Tombs, Lovell Carroll and Professor R. de laFrenche.

Solomon Zatz pointed out that since radio is an important medium for the dissemination of ideas it should be government controlled for the benefit of the health and morals of the community. The evil effects of beer should not be ignored in the consideration of beer advertising, he declared. For the negative Alex Stalker declared that anything in excess is bad, and that the advertising of beer must not be forbidden on this ground alone. The freedom of the press applies to radio as well as to the newspapers.

The speaker for the affirmative, Zatz, declared that the radio is a social responsibility of the state, and in that capacity must be controlled by the state in the interests of the people. In other words, the radio must not be used as a means of spreading a false conception of drink. The unfortunate aggressiveness of breweries in making people drink should not be allowed, the speaker stated. The profit motive must not have any influence on the matter of advertising beer over the air; alcohol decreases men's efficiency and also develops a bad habit in the youth of Canada. The attitude of defeatism is most discouraging, yet such is the result of drinking among the youth. The radio must not, Zatz concluded, be a means of promoting vice but one of suppressing it. The health and economic circumstances of the community are at stake. For the negative Alex Stalker showed that the press must not be partial and allow some businesses to advertise and others not, since beer is legally sold in Quebec. The suppression of the advertising of a legal commodity means a loss of business to the radio corporations. The speaker then made several comparisons between the Padlock Law and the present law denying brewers the right to advertise their products via the radio. For although people may not be communistic, the speaker continued, they may still protest the anti-communist law. In a like manner, they protest the restrictions against the brewers, though they may deem beer a harmful drink. After all, Stalker declared, if beer is legally sold in this province it must also be allowed to advertise on the air as are other products. The government must not be partial.

In rebuttal Solomon Zatz pointed out that the law, as endorsed and subscribed to by the citizens of Quebec, does not allow beer advertising over the radio. The problem is not one of legal and impartial interest but one of medical and psychological importance. Beer does induce the consumption of beer and as such must be controlled. Quebec is the only province prohibiting such advertising; let us keep it so. Profit is not the complete motive. The economics and health of the people must be the criterion, and by this criterion beer must not have permission to advertise over the radio.

HISTORICALS HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET

R.V.C. and Men's Clubs Climax Year's Activities Saturday

The McGill Historical Club in conjunction with the Historical Club of Royal Victoria College will hold their annual formal Banquet in the Queen's Hotel this Saturday, March 18, at 7.15 p.m. Admission is open to all members and also to all those interested, and the charge is $1.15. This is the last meeting of the year for both clubs.

Climaxing the Clubs' activities, Professor Herbert Heaton, economic historian from the University of Minnesota, will speak at the banquet on "Clío in Overalls" i.e. history coming down to the hard facts of life. Professor Heaton is an author of some note, having travelled widely, lecturing in England, Australia, and Canada.

During this year the Historical Club has held meetings of varied entertainment, including the reading of papers on numerous topics. Among the papers that were read were "The Life and Times of Mozart," "Espionage," "The Historical and Cultural Background of Alsace," "The Emperor Franz Joseph," and "Schiller."

Tickets for the Banquet on Saturday may be obtained from C. H. Von Cardinal, L. A. Seton, G. Rodney, and from any of the executive of the Historical Club of R. V. C.

VARSITY ENDS YEAR

Sends Congratulations to McGill Daily

Toronto, March 17.—(C.U.P.)—The Varsity, University of Toronto undergraduate newspaper, sends its congratulations to the McGill Daily and best wishes for the examinations.

Seaborn Albright, Managing Editor of the Varsity, was appointed new Editor-in-chief by the Students' Council Wednesday night. The final issue of the Varsity, an eight page paper, will carry the report that this past year is the largest advertising year the Varsity has ever had.

Mr. Marriott said in his speech that although the people of Australia knew Montreal only as a name, McGill was very well-known to everyone down there. The complete list of promotions (Continued on Page Six)

Around the Campus

This is the last roundup for this illustrious and most read item . . . There remain but five weeks to the end of lectures in most faculties—But this is a list of what is happening during those weeks. . . The combined historical forces of the R.V.C. Historical Club and the McGill Historical Club (the oldest organization on the campus—plug) will rattle with soup and fish at their formal this Saturday night at the Queen's Hotel at 7.15 — All invited . . . The same night the Cosmopolitan Club plans to while away a few hours in the evening with the showing of the Swedish film "En Saga" . . . Then dancing after the show . . . All at Strathcona Hall . . . Sunday afternoon the Maccabean Circle meets in the Union for a discussion of most important affairs . . . Spring, beautiful Spring Camp will be on preview at the final S.C.M. Open House for the year at Strathcona Hall on Sunday at 8.30 . . . Public Health and its meaning to you (and I do mean you) will be mooted Monday night when Dean Fleming meets the Pre-Med Society in the Union at 8.30 . . . Tuesday, Arts students get their regular exercise of the franchise when they troop to the polls to select next year's officers . . . Charley Lipton next Thursday will discuss philosophy before the Philosophical Society . . . Strange, what? . . . That rounds out the year as far as everything is concerned, except for Convocation May 21 . . . Oh yes, did you say something about final exams? . . . Think nothing of them . . . See you next September.

World News in Brief

German Ambassador to be Recalled

London, March 16.—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons that Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, would in all probability be summoned to London for an indefinite period to report. At the same time, Chamberlain stated he thought no useful purpose could be served by British intervention.

Race Cry Raised in Ontario House

Toronto, March 16.—J. A. Habel, a Liberal member of the Provincial Parliament, raised a commotion in the House when he accused the Conservative leader, Col. George A. Drew, of terming the French Canadians defeated race.

Hungarians Seize Ruthenian Capital

Chust, Carpatho-Ukraine, March 16.—This city was completely under Hungarian control tonight and the Ukrainian storm-troopers had withdrawn to the mountains after bitter fighting. Meanwhile Hitler absorbed the two-day-old independent state of Slovakia.

We Look Back

WE look back on the term, on five months of activities glowing with college life. We look back as Volume 28 of the Daily is about to be closed, and we reflect on events that have passed before us.

We look back and realize why to one hundred workers of the Daily suspension of publication is greeted with sadness mingled with sighs of relief, why they will be able to forsake typewriters to tackle textbooks.

We look back and see a quiet, reasonably uneventful year with its Football Championship and its Sadie Hawkins Week. No major issues—such as confronted our predecessors—made ugly faces at us. No mass meetings split the Campus into two warring sides.

We look back and wonder if the Daily has succeeded in one of its prime objectives—to reproduce accurately a cross-section of student life as it exists at McGill, to paint a sharp, fair picture of affairs that occupy students outside the classroom.

We look forward and see a fine, capable staff carrying on, trying to satisfy the tastes of three thousand students.

Soon: A Gymnasium

SINCE the turn of the century there has been much talk wherever McGill men gather concerning a gymnasium proposed for the "near future." During the last forty years many attempts were made to put promises into concrete form. Now, for the first time, we can safely say that McGill University will soon boast an athletic centre for students. Students entering the University next year may well find at their disposal on Pine Avenue the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium.

Principal Douglas, in a statement carried in the current issue of The McGill News, announces: "Mr. Paine's plans and specifications, he estimates, will be completed by the end of March. Tenders will then be invited. If an acceptable bid be received which will provide for the construction of the gymnasium, and the purchase of the necessary equipment, all within the limits of the funds now available, and to be supplemented by the graduates, a contract will be officially executed. It is anticipated that construction will be under

THE BOOKSHELF

WICKFORD POINT by John P. Marquand; Little, Brown & Co., Boston; pp. 458; $2.75.

The author of the Pulitzer Prize novel "The Late George Apley" knows his New England. He knows all its virtues and faults, and he has set them all down in a uniquely satirical manner in "Wickford Point". It is a novel which concerns itself with the everyday life of an old New England family living a hand-to-mouth existence at Wickford Point, an hour's ride from Boston.

Using his wit to add the whimsical highlights to his vignettes of these New Englanders, John Marquand has succeeded in painting a picture of a life which is fast disappearing. The hierarchy of birth, the prestige acquired by social misfits due to that accident, and the ridiculousness of the entrenchment of this family are gently, but effectively, ridiculed. The reader gets a picture of a secluded world, Wickford Point, which is untouched by the changing scene of the rest of humanity. Wealth, ability, common sense, they all lose their intrinsic and basic values within the confines of this household.

The wilful demands of Bella, Cousin Clotilde, Harry Brill, and all other gallery of characters present a tragi-comedy which can only be depicted by an accomplished artist. Marquand did it. If nothing else, the style of this book should serve to keep the reader. It is pleasingly brisk, and at no time boring, making the book as well-balanced in respect to technical construction as it is in point of plot.

—L. N. P.

MY MEMOIR by Edith Bolling Wilson (Mrs. Woodrow Wilson); The Bobbs-Merrill Company, New York; pp. 360; $3.75.

History from the vantage point of one who was on the "inside" of things is told in this autobiography of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Ten years in the writing, the book presents a complete biography of Woodrow Wilson, rather than of the author. As Mrs. Wilson says in her preface, "I have related the truth concerning personal matters, which has been often distorted by the misinformed. And if I take the public into my confidence about these matters, it is because the high office which my husband held robs them of a private character and makes me feel that they belong to history."

With such a foreword Mrs. Wilson proceeds to tell her own story, leading up to the time when Woodrow Wilson came into her life, and finally culminating in their marriage. From that point onward the narrative is devoted more to him than to the author's own story. Their life together, the President's political endeavours, the strains of his election campaign, Europe after the war, Wilson's efforts in the cause of a "just peace", all these are set forth in a very convincing and pleasantly-personal manner. All the little incidents of private life are interspersed here and there to give the book a piquancy and liveliness seldom encountered in biographies of public men. The completeness and thoroughness which characterize this book are its most meritorious points from the historian's point of view. No pains have been spared to make the work authentic as well as enticing; the combination is one that leaves a very favourable impression when the reader has finished the last sentence.

—L. N. P.

THE MUSIC OF LANGUAGE by J. Campbell-McInnes; The Frederick Harris Co., Oakville, Ontario; pp. 92; $1.00.

Mr. Campbell-McInnes has written a short, but very comprehensive, analysis of the basis of language, with special reference to the English language. He has analysed the philology and phonetics of English, and has even gone into the physiological basis of speech. After these preliminaries the author has devoted a good part of the book to illustrations on the use and abuse of words. He has compiled a list of examples of the relation between music and words, and has ably shown how to cultivate the first and avoid the second. It is a book well worth the perusal of the prospective author or news-monger.

—L. N. P.

THE PATRIOT by Pearl S. Buck; The John Day Co., New York; pp. 358; $2.50.

For the most part comparisons are apt to be odious. Although it may be easy to collate the qualities of a Stravinsky and a Beethoven it is not so certain just how worthwhile the results will be, for while an analytic statement may be valuable one's primary reaction of like way before summer, and that the building will be ready for occupation before the end of the year."

Dr. A. S. Lamb, writing in The News, sums up in a few words the story of the gymnasium: "A dream of generations of students is about to be realized. As a result of unavoidable limitations in space and money, the plans have undergone much study and frequent modification. In spite of these difficulties, however, McGill will have—with the exception of a swimming pool—the finest gymnasium plant in the country."

or dislikes will not have greatly changed. A work of art will rest, finally, on its own peculiar merits despite whatever carping critics may say. Thus, though useful comparisons may be drawn between this latest work of the Nobel Prize winner and her past books on China, "The Patriot" will not only measure up closely to them but in itself is a finely-wrought tale of the East, one that also stands far removed in style and narration to the majority of contemporary novels.

This time Japan is fused with China into a tragedy of romance and politics. I-wan, the grandson of wealthy, idiosyncratic General Wu, becomes involved in communistic activities at home in the belief, somewhat confused and vague, that his actions will help to liberate the oppressed. When Chiang Kai-Shek performs his customary volte-face I-wan is forced to leave home and takes up residence with a rich and friendly Japanese family. He becomes a clerk in the large art firm, acquires a liking for Japanese courtesy and manner of living and in due time marries his benefactor's daughter, Tama, who obtains her parent's consent by slashing one wrist and threatening to do the same with the other. Children are born and the tranquil peace of Eastern philosophy descends over the household. Eight years later an earthquake destroys part of the town and the symbolism of this portentous event finds reflection in characters and events. The heavy traditionalism of Japan refuses to mingle with the gay, less fierce, less dogmatic Chinese way of life and I-wan leaves Tama to join his countrymen in their fight against her people. Although they correspond, each recognizes the inevitability and accept resignedly the fate which superior political machinations have carved for them. At the end, I-wan, still puzzled by the new invasion of wars and ideas he cannot comprehend, is taking his latest orders from Chiang Kai-Shek.

The tale is not unusual. It is in Pearl Buck's dexterous handling of the difficult theme of Chinese versus Japanese, in the power and warmth her facile pen lends each scene and incident that there emerge the unique qualities which place The Patriot on a pedestal. Here, in the love of Tama and I-wan, is the cool, sequestered vale where one may enter, ponder and admire the restrained dignity, the daintiness and charm that suffuse the lives of these creatures who are rich materially but spiritually are of the soil. The character of Tama has been beautifully captured by Pearl Buck. In her complete submission to authority whether father's or emperor's, she resembles Cordelia; in her knowledge of the complexities of life, in her grasp of the subtleties required to be mother, wife, mistress and companion she is as modern as any Canadiana. The other characters are less sharply focussed, and the scenes of the Sino-Japanese conflict are too few.

The style is simple: as limpid, clear, musical and enchanting as a Chinese landscape painting; as economical of line, movement and expression as the orientals she delineates. Pearl Buck reveals an unusual insight into this inter-racial struggle when she has Chiang Kai-Shek remark: "We must plan our war after the Japanese have ended theirs."

GUNS OF BURGOYNE by Bruce Lancaster; Frederick Stokes Co.; Toronto; pp. 425; $2.50.

Interesting in narrative, sprightly in comedy relief, giving a reasonably accurate account of historical events, "Guns of Burgoyne" is a book which any student will find interesting and instructive.

Beginning in the year 1778, this historical novel is centred about a young Hessian, Kurt Ahrens, whose specialty is the science and control of gunnery. Moving throughout the story we find "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne, about whom so much has already been written in history. However, Mr. Lancaster has not dwelt to any great extent on this leader, but has concentrated his narrative about the troops and their reactions to the campaign in America.

The opening chapter details the enlistment of recruits in Germany for the Emperor's army. Soon the scene shifts and the reader finds himself following the movements of Burgoyne's army in America. Events are presented in a way that holds the interests of the readers even when historical facts are being related.

Romantic interest is not neglected. Ahrens, the hero chosen by the author, has a hobby of looking at and admiring pretty girls. As with most novels of this kind, romance rises to a crescendo on the closing page as Kurt and his most beloved become united.

Bruce Lancaster has done a fine job with this, a second novel. We hope that he will in the future contribute more to American literature.

MEIN KAMPF by Adolf Hitler (First Complete Unexpurgated Edition); Reynal & Hitchcock, New York; pp. 993; $3.00.

At the moment of going to press we have received a review copy of Mein Kampf by the head of Nazi Germany. This book, the Bible of the Nazi creed, is now published for the first time in its unexpurgated entirety in the English language. We have, up to now, read only the expurgated editions; and we believe that the reader has already gained a working knowledge of the context of this book from newspaper accounts during the past few years. However, it seems particularly appropriate to publish it now in its entirety.

The notable thing, to this reviewer's mind about this edition of Mein Kampf is the fact that the proceeds of its sales, after all expenditures have been deducted, will be handed over to a fund for the aid of refugees from the terror which has been engendered as a result of the doctrines and aims set forth in the volume. So worthy a cause would have been better served by a worthy agent. However, events and public interest being what they are, we believe that the acuteness of the refugee situation demands the employment of all available methods of alleviation, even if they appear odious to some of us....

MUSIC

VALEDICTORY AND SUGGESTIONS.

Throughout the year we have written with amazing regularity in columns, reviews and advance notices that this season has shown conclusively that there is a need and desire for musical facilities at McGill and this moth-eaten truism shall serve as our parting word this season. Many circumstances have combined to make this year one of outstanding musical progress on the campus. We have received our record library from the Carnegie Institute and our music room, the gift of Mrs. Graham Drinkwater. The number of students' tickets for the concerts of the Montreal Orchestra has been substantially increased and Dean Clarke's excellent Friday afternoon series of concert-lectures has proved justly popular.

Three concerts, all of extremely high calibre were presented during the year, the Women's Union bringing the Hart House String Quartet to Montreal, the Conservatorium sponsoring Harriet Cohen's recital, and the Students' Society presenting Henry Brant earlier this month. The success of these ventures and the enthusiasm with which they were received means that a similar and enlarged project of a similar nature be undertaken. McGill is far behind most of the leading Universities artistically, and this venture is an important step in a definite direction.

Several rather startling facts have come to light throughout the course of the year. Foremost is the discovery that the ENGINEERS are the most musical people at McGill. All evidence has pointed to this predominance of plumber aesthetics; proportionately, the Engineers who spend their noon-hours and free period at the Carnegie Music Room far outnumber students of any other faculty. Medicine ranks high, and the low mark goes without challenge to Law. Men students have shown themselves much more interested in musical matters than women students.

For next year we propose the formation of a music society by students in all faculties interested in music at McGill. Plans for a more complete usage of the almost unlimited resources of our Carnegie collection and Music Room, to embrace directed informal courses in history and other aspects of music. This society will also sponsor the proposed series of recitals to be held throughout the school year. Plans for the society will be drawn up this summer by a committee and organization will begin early next year.

This column and many of the projects sponsored under the auspices of this column would have been almost impossible without the co-operation of Ralph A. Moore, who has been wisely referred to as "The distinguished critic R.A.M." For two years he has done yeoman work for music at McGill and in his quiet way has accomplished a great deal. A large group has done work on the Music staff of the "Daily" this season and we should like to thank them all for their help and co-operation—Sam Schechter, Sam Mislav, Henry Patterson, Bernice Viner, Allen Gold, Gerry McKee, Lou Poch, Glyn Owen, Gerard Lippert and Edward Rosen. In addition thanks are due the many students who have acted as ushers at the concerts of the Montreal Orchestra. We look forward to working again with the people who have this season contributed to this column again next year.—R. D. R.

SALESMANSHIP

—the Business Career of the Future

Salesmanship can be the best of careers to the right man. Many men with a college education, by reason of their attainments, have been highly successful in this profession.

Have YOU the essential qualifications for such a career?

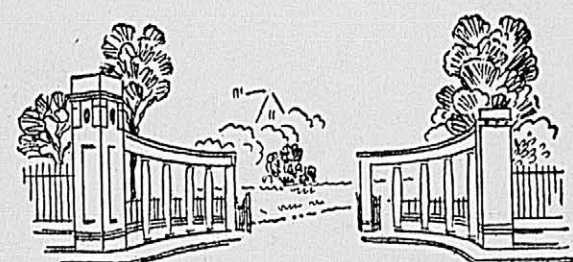

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada has recently developed a method which will determine this for you—a method which is simple yet reasonably accurate. Following a series of questions, you will be told quite frankly whether or not you possess the qualities necessary for a selling career. The test is interesting and instructive and will require only a few minutes of your time. McGill Graduates—or near Graduates—in Law or Commerce who are in search of a real business opportunity are strongly advised to discuss this test plan with Mr. W. R. Moreland, Manager, St. James Branch, Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

SPORTS ROUNDUP IN BRIEF

SENIOR FOOTBALL

Four years of patience and foresight brought an end to ten years of waiting and hoping when Coach Doug Kerr completed his four year plan of rugby tactics at McGill to bring home the first Football championship since 1928. Featuring a well-balanced machine the Redmen sent McGill's colours soaring in front of the league after a highly successful season in which defeat was only tasted once.

There was no stopping the all-around smoothness of the speedy Redmen and it looked as if the long-sought title would come to McGill without any real opposition. The last scheduled game of the year witnessed McGill go down to their first defeat when the Galloping Mustangs won to force a play-off. In the sudden-death game between McGill and Western, played at Molson Stadium, Hoofing Herb Westman and Ronnie Perowne combined to furnish a decisive victory and championship for McGill.

It was by no means a two-man team that won the title. The glories and deeds of each member have already been sung. It will be a long time before the memories of such graduating stars as Herb Westman, Andy Anton, Ronnie Perowne, Bucko Kenny, Prestie Robb, Jimmy Hall, Captain Lou Ruschin, Murray Telford, Chip Drury, and Joe Jacobson will fade from the minds of McGill fans.

To the newly elected Captain, Alec Hamilton falls the task of leading McGill's first defence of the Yates trophy and he will find an eager group of Intermediates and Juniors to support him.

POLO AND SWIMMING

The Water Polo squad was successful in obtaining the Intercollegiate Crown again. This conquest was the sixth consecutive title which the Red Natators have acquired in this field. Although many of the players are graduating this year the squad hopes to keep this title to perpetuity as it were.

The swimming squad was not as successful as the water polo squad in that they were defeated by Toronto in the Collegiate efforts. In the city meets the team finished up second, and with the new material that was being developed this year the team expects to be tops.

Four Dark M's Will Greet In-Coming Frosh

When next year's crop of Freshmen hunt through their little red handbooks to find out how many championships their new Alma Mater holds they may be disappointed. They will see eight T's and only four or five dark M's.

The various teams which sported Red colours this year copped four championships and fought to a brilliant three way draw in the basketball race.

Of the four sports in which McGill stood out as sole leaders, three of them were sports in which the Red teams were defenders, the fourth something that hasn't happened in ten years—a football title.

The other championships are hockey, harriers and water-polo. McGill has held the hockey championship since 1932. They have taken the Alexis Thompson Trophy since it was put up for competition three years ago. This season, like last year the hockeyists rode through the Intercollegiate schedule with one defeat. Last year it was the rough-riding Tricolour sextette that marred the Redmen's record. This year it was Toronto.

This is the third year McGill has run away with the harrier championship.

It is the sixth year the poloists have won.

Coach Van Wagner's cage team which was whipped into fighting strength in the last two games of the schedule created an unprecedented upset when they turned back last year's champions, Western, and took the high flying Blues of Toronto on the following night to create a three way tie for first place.

"And after seven lean years there shall be seven years of plenty," With Coach Doug Kerr at the helm of McGill's football team the old adage is being given a new turn. For after ten years of rugby famine, in which the championship travelled around the four team College circuit without stopping even once at McGill, the Redmen are again champions of the league. The Kerr Klan had a well-balanced machine which swept to the title and a system of play that bids well for the future and those next ten years of plenty.

The Vickerson Stein Trophy is still being competed for, and it is hoped that many students will enter this competition. Israel Shragovitch, Lorne Shapiro, Jack Leonard are the members of the squad that are graduating this year, and although this will leave the squad in a weakened condition, such old stand-bys as Pete Bourne, Lorne Lindsay, Hugh McGuire and Johnny Powell will be on hand to continue their good work and winning ways.

SENIOR HOCKEY

McGill colours still float in front of two College leagues as paced by the brilliant playing of Captain Russ McConnell the Red Raiders captured their third straight title in the International Intercollegiate Hockey League and stretched their uninterrupted reign of the Canadian Intercollegiate League to seven consecutive titles. Coach Hugh Farquharson's puckchasers swept through a tougher array of opposition than has faced them in recent years with only one blemish on the account sheet.

Varsity finally had the satisfaction of getting a decision over their ancient rivals and experienced extra bliss in that the setback they handed McGill at Toronto by the slim 4-3 score was the only loss suffered by the champion Redmen in their collegiate schedules.

McGill missed making the playoffs in the Senior Group when they landed in fifth place. A slow start in which their opponents found the Redmen easy pickings was accelerated after the Christmas holidays when McGill more than held their own against all comers. Captain McConnell was awarded the Stewart Trophy for being the most valuable player in the league.

Leaving large gaps, which Coach Farquharson will find difficult to fill, are the graduations of such outstanding players as Russ McConnell, Ronnie Perowne, and Andy Anton.

SENIOR BASKETBALL

Listed among the biggest surprises of the current season is the remarkable double win of the Senior Cagers at Toronto and London to bring themselves into a playoff position with both Western and Varsity. It is most unfortunate that nothing was done about arranging playoffs to determine the league champions, because after such a spectacular bid for the title it was quite a let down for the seniors to be told that there would be no playdowns. The inevitable result of such a situation was shown the next evening when the Redmen prepared to defend their city title against the Y.M.H.A. quintet. The Blue and White squad, notwithstanding the fact that they did not have as efficient a team as the McGillites, nevertheless found the Redmen easy prey as they swarmed in on McGill territory with surprising ease.

A source of much satisfaction in basketball circles is the fact that there is only one member of the senior squad who will not return next year, and although the player in question is high scoring Neville Wykes it is believed that McGill will have a more powerful basketball squad next season.

Warren Sandburg, who played regularly at guard this year is undoubtedly the most improved man on the team climaxing his brilliant playing by his high scoring efforts in McGill's playoff bid against Western and Toronto.

CLASS OF '39

ISRAEL SHRAGOVITCH

Another of McGill's unsung heroes is Israel "Shrag" Shragovitch. Shrag was a member of the Swimming Team and Captain of the Water Polo Team this year. He has the distinction of being one of the only players who has helped McGill in her annexations of the six consecutive Water Polo Titles. Besides this Shrag has proved himself the gamest swimmer the Red Team has seen in many a year.

Shragovitch attended Byron Byng High School where he was first introduced to Water Polo. His wide stocky build combined with his ability as a swimmer made him a very formidable player. He started off as a senior on the McGill squad and he was always considered one of the main threats on the team. Last year he was given a city trophy as the most valuable player on his team. As this year's captain of the squad he finished off his college career in a blaze of glory, when he led the team to their sixth water polo title. During the swimming meets Shrag could always be called upon to fill in an event, besides being one of the best men in the 440 free style and the 100 back stroke event.

Graduating medicine this spring, Israel will leave a big gap in the ranks of the water babies, but it is hoped that he will alleviate this

PIERRE DESSAULES

The tennis team will suffer a great loss next year as their Captain Pierre Dessaulles graduates as a full-fledged lawyer. Pierre was one of the mainstays of the tennis team for the past three years. The tall, blond curly haired player was one of the flashiest players on the court, and his efforts in the Intercollegiate tournaments marked him as one of the top ranking players in the college ranks.

Dessaules was born in 1916 and before coming to McGill he attended the Jesuits College. He was an ardent tennis fan, and he learned much of his tennis at that college. Pierre broke into McGill's tennis ranks as a senior, and in each of his three years he received the second grade letter. On the court Pierre plays a hard driving game, and he won most of his games by skillfully placed shots.

Besides being famed for his tennis activities, Pierre participated in Interfaculty Sports. He played on the hockey and softball teams, and his ability in these fields was as marked as his tennis playing. Dessaulles graduates law this spring, and before long we will be seeing him on and in the courts.

condition by bringing many more babies of his calibre into this world, for future Red teams.

CALLING ALL SKIERS

By Hickory Blades

What a Winter! Hickory Blades himself couldn't have put together a better one. There was just one flea in the ointment, somebody called Dartmouth, won the I. S. U. Aw well—these SMALL meets!—McGill can't win everything—it wouldn't look right—or something—UH, HUH.

But now Spring! The snow is packed hard, surfaced with a half inch of "corn" snow. The sun when it shines, lightens a world with a brilliant backdrop of blue. March with good Spring-skiing is by far the most enjoyable month of the year. The races are through, the exams still to come. With Sunday as yet a day of leisure, the male counterpart of Dame Fashion in the north country sports sun glasses, a bottle of Skol, and no shirt.

It looks as if we'll have to say good-bye to some of McGill's nicest people. There's that fellow "Jackrabbit" Johannsen Jr., known better locally as Capt. Bob; he did everything but sleep and study on his skis. His worst fault was that habit of "lifting" the silver wherever he went, the subsequent accumulation of buckets and bowls proved very useful when he began the manufacturing of his ski wax.

Not to be outdone by such goings on by a mere brother, Peg proceeded to carve a very substantial niche for herself in the Skier's Hall of Fame, and the Ladies Dominion Championship trophy, bears very prominently on its flank for the year 1938, the name of Miss Peggy Johannsen. It was the sight of Peg "shussing" Hill 70 one fine day, some years back that led this master mind to take up the gentle art of ski racing—the first two years are the most painful—Bill Tait is another one of (Continued on Page Four.)

those fellows it will be hard to get accustomed to missing. A mainstay of the Ski Team for eight years, they saw fit perennially to include him as their best cross-country runner. In the last few years his efforts in downhill and slalom have been as successful as those in the langlauf, and he will graduate from medicine as one of McGill's great all-around skiers.

"High Flying" Henry Findlay is the last of James McGill's graduating skiers. Last year's City Jumping Champ, Pres. of the Ski Club, etc., etc. Henry's brain was called into action as much as his brawn, and as a direct result, yesterday's meeting concluded a most successful Ski Club year under his leadership. Coach Bill Ball paid tribute to the enthusiasm of this executive and of the Ski Club as a whole. The great triumph of the year was Manager Herb von Colditz's I.S.U. meet, one of the most successful Ski Meets on record.

This is the right time of year for predictions; the races are over and next winter is a long way off. Luckily, human beings are unlike elephants in this respect, in that they do forget. This past winter will probably mark the end of the college boys' supremacy on the racing trails. This is not in reference to the tricky balance now existing as the Laurentian's ace combine of Trotter and Chevalier "see-saws" for first place with the best of the collegians, i.e., Mann, Moore, Johansson, and Townsend, but rather to the situation in the juniors. Under eighteen years of age, many of these lads are beating the "A" class "top-notchers" consistently.

Following the footsteps of compatriots, Cousineau and Cochand, the new miracle man is young seventeen-year-old Rolf Andre. It is boys of this calibre who will delegate McGill's best to third and fourth positions when they again spend days at the races.

We believe this is all to the best. A whole new industry has been opened up for Quebec, and it is these boys who are going to make it grow. The college boys played around, developed the technique, and generally lead the way. The necessary impetus has been given, and from now on the city fellows will more and more have to be content with second place.

Dr. Bill Ball resigned his position of head coach, due to the pressure of increasing responsibilities in his work. In his three years of directing the destiny of McGill's great teams, Bill has taken on all comers in the Ski Club, distributing technical advice and example as freely as he was able. Thoughtful as ever, he succeeded in providing a worthy successor, in the person of "Kandahar" George Jost.

George is another honoured McGill Grad and one of Dr. Ball's fellow Red Birds. George's skiing fame rests on his European exploits. He is a member of the Kandahar Ski Club of Great Britain and the only Canadian holder of their highest award, the gold "K". This distinction is merited only by those who perform some outstanding feat, such as winning a European Kandahar race. This George did at Murren, a few years ago. His unorthodox style is still recalled amongst his European friends as one of the oddities of the sport.

Now for the paragraph I like best, Mary and I, the "Hickory Blades," say good-bye for this year. No more frenzied midnights in the Daily office—no more worries that the column might unintentionally offend someone; in fact what we like about it all is that there are NO MORE WORRIES—(until next year) so good-bye now!!

THE HICKORY BLADES.

CALLING ALL COEDS.

By Winnifred

to get into the finals of the Bronze Baby tourney at London, and to come out with a fine record of clean sporting play. In their University League games, the McGill squad came out on top, while in the Intramural games, the M.S.P.E. triumphed for the first time since way back in 1924. Many of the members of the College team that was sent to London will be graduating, such notable players as Mona Robinson, the captain and manager, Emily Irving, Florence Lincoln, and Ruth Schofield. But with the sterling basketball players that have entered College during the past year, Posy Power the new manager has high hopes for the future.

No less prominent in the field of coed athletics are the Badminton players. Under the very able management of Doris Banfill, the manager, many nightly practices and weekly round robins were held. The value gained from these continual matches was admirably illustrated when the R.V.C.ites came so close to winning the Intercollegiate badminton Tourney, being edged out by Toronto by one point. The Shuttlecock experts had the misfortune of losing one of their best players, Kay Baxter, at the eleventh hour. Dot McCaig filled in the deficiency very well. Lila Redmond and Dora Proven clinched the Badminton doubles title. In the M.W.S.A.A. Badminton tournaments those girls who proved outstanding in the Intercollegiate meet once more came to the fore, with Dora Proven defeating Margaret Dick 11-2, 11-1; while Lila Redmond and Dora Proven took Dot McCaig and Kay Baxter 15-6, 15-8 in the doubles.

Showing up very well in all their games except the last one the coed hockeyists had a very successful season. Casualties were few and the play was always clean, a disparity of penalties in all their frays being predominant. Their closing game with Bishops was really most unfortunate—the Lennoxville girls were definitely out to get the R.V.C. ites, and they did it with a struggle. This was the first time that the McGill coed hockeyists have been beaten in six years, and it is hoped that they will forget their one defeat and continue on another six years of victories. Several of the members of the team will be graduating, Ruth Schofield and Barbara Barnard from M.S.P.E., and Eileen Harris and Peggy Lamb from Arts, but as the freshettes have proven very enthusiastic this year, they should go places next year, if they succeed in getting Jean Buchanan as their coach once more.

The noble art of fencing is the newest sport at McGill, that is for the coeds. Only this year under the able direction of the fencing manager Margo van Reet and Maitre Blau was any interest fostered in parries and thrusts. Next year if as many coeds turn out, and do as well as the fencers have done this year, they should be able to enter some outside competition.

The ping pong experts have been going at it fast and furiously this year, holding a competition within R. V. C. and without as well. Irene Smith has proved an excellent manager and it is to be hoped that this rigorous indoor sport will gain even more headway next year.

Archery under the able direction of Maryellen Rossiter has been doing wonders this year. Indoor and outdoor tourneys have been much in vogue with Eileen Harris gaining the wide open spaces trophy and Irene Smith walking away with inside honors. Archery, however, has not completed its season. Tomorrow Macdonald College is coming in to try their luck against the R.V.C. Bow Benders. Next Friday night the Sun Life will be shooting at McGill to wind up their season. And so good-bye until next year! We hope!

BOXING & WRESTLING

Hard luck dogged the boxing and wrestling teams of McGill and Coaches Bert Light and Frank Saxton led a team minus many of their best hopes to Toronto where Varsity romped home as winners of the B. W. & F. tournament. Injuries, sickness, and academic troubles placed a count of nine on McGill's chances before they even arrived at the Queen City.

Tom Hughes, in the heavyweight section, was the only champion for the Redmen. Several McGillites placed in the finals but missed the decision. McGill's supremacy in fencing was ended as Varsity fencers took the fencing championship.

SKIERS HOLD FINAL MEETING OF YEAR

opening speech. He stressed the fact that the way the ski club ran the Intercollegiate Ski Union Meet at St. Marguerites merited the admiration of all who took part.

Coach Billy Ball announced his retirement from the post on the McGill Ski Club which he has ably filled for the past three years. His services will be missed greatly by the team.

Presentation of awards was made to the members of the ski team. Nominated again for the post of honorary president was Dr. L. Telford, who was unanimously re-elected. For the 1938-1940 edition of the ski team, Jack Bovard was elected president. Secretary-Treasurer was Norman Benson. Don Tirrell will captain the team.

GYM

McGill tumblers again fell prey to Varsity in the Intercollegiate Gym meet held at Toronto as the Blue Boys registered their seventh straight victory in this annual event. Coach Hay Finlay led a strong, well-trained squad to Toronto and lost after a close fight. In the Wicksteed Meet held early in February, Art Henderson came off with top honours. The Wicksteed Meet is the oldest Interfaculty competition at McGill. There being no graduating member competing this year the Silver Wicksteed medal was not awarded, but the bronze medal awarded to the best Gymnast in Intermediate years was won by Art Henderson of Engineering. The Dr. F. W. Harvey Cup was won by Art Weber.

FOOTBALL

McGill's carefully built up coaching system on the gridiron was successful in bringing a Senior and Intermediate football title into the Redmen's sanctum. Furthermore the Junior squad landed in second place in their league in which the powerful Loyola team took the title. The Intermediates under the able guidance of Coach Buster Fletcher rapidly developed into a powerful and speedy squad. With most of the seniors leaving this year the burden of defending the championship will rest mainly with the Intermediates. Such men as Perry Foster as kicking half-back and Gordie McGibbon, Normie Cuke and Nussbaum will be expected to fill in very important gaps due to graduation in senior ranks.

Wally Markham who as junior coach is expected to start developing players who may some day make the senior squad has built up a very enviable record for himself as a capable coach. The Junior Redmen have at all times been a powerful threat in their league and always command the respect of opposing squads.

Canadian Nickel

GIVES GREATER DURABILITY

THE RAM of a 100 ton forging hammer rains 50-ton blows on the anvil. Ordinary metals cannot stand the strain or vibration.

The ring of a hand hammer resounds as metal meets metal. Sooner or later ordinary steel or iron will break under constant use and abuse.

So the makers of machinery and tools the world over have turned to Canadian Nickel to prolong the life of their products. Nickel alloys in actual use have lasted two, ten, even twenty times as long as the metals they have replaced. That is why the demand for Canadian Nickel has steadily increased. That is why the Nickel mines near Sudbury have periodically increased their output and employed more men. That is why additions have been made time after time to the immense smelting plants at Copper Cliff and the refineries at Port Colborne, Ontario.

This great Canadian industry stimulates Canadian prosperity. The millions it pays each year in wages, and for equipment, power, timber and freight, circulate to every corner of the Dominion. Every Canadian benefits as the Nickel industry prospers.

"The surest thing you know," answered Terry zealously. "You've come to the right person." He asked himself why he hadn't noticed her smile before and the healthy colour of her cheeks. "Just hand me the address. I'll be over there in an hour. No, make it an hour-and-a-half. And don't worry about anything, Miss Brewster."

She said softly, "You may call me Doris now. I've a premonition we're going to be great friends, Reformer."

Once outside the building Doris Brewster beamed ecstatically upon everyone. She had every reason in the world to feel elated. The dear, sweet bunny hadn't suspected a thing.

Seated on the large trunk, waving the kerchief with which he dabbed his brow at intervals, Bartlett expanded his views on the faulty world. Doris was busily tidying up the rooms and putting her things away.

"Yes, yes, Terry," she urged from the tiny kitchenette. "I can hear you!" The apartment she had taken was snugness itself and central. Also it was conveniently near to the hospital where Terry was getting his medical practice.

"I was saying that everyone has definite social responsibilities. He may not be aware of them but he has them just the same. People should help one another. But they don't. Hence the terrific mess we're in. Hence the bread-lines, bonuses, W.P.A.s and what not. They're all symptoms really of one disease—moral cowardice."

He lifted himself off the trunk and began to circumnavigate the room. He was just rounding his lips to another sentence when Doris called him.

"Say Terry, try some reforming on this lampshade." She held up the offending object. Terry curved the thick wires into their proper shape and gave it back to her. Then he glanced at his wrist-watch and gave a loud exclamation. "Holy jumping Jupiter, it's almost eleven! I'll be late." He waved Doris' thanks aside impatiently and seizing his hat rushed to the door.

"I'll ring you at the office to find out how you slept," he called back. And then he was gone.

That night Doris Brewster made another resolution. In fact, she made several. She would set about in earnest improving her mind. It was amazing how she had let herself go since she had graduated from Brookwood. A study circle with meetings twice a month was not enough. Solid reading three hours every other evening. Anyway two. No back sliding this time either. And fewer dates that gobbled up your time uselessly. She would catch up with current events. What was the book Terry had mentioned? "The Citadel." She would pick it up tomorrow morning on her way to the office. O, oh yes, she'd do social work as well. Hadn't she taken several snap courses in Economics and Sociology 6? Terry was decidedly right. Every person owed something to the society in which he lived. Irresponsibility. Selfishness. She would carve these out ruthlessly from her nature. And picturing to herself her new role, Doris Brewster fell into a happy slumber. But not before she had murmured to herself over and over again, "The New Type, The 1939 Special. My Mr. Reformer."

The black hands of her expensive wrist-watch seemed to be motionless. Would 5.30 never come? Terry had phoned early in the morning and they had agreed to meet at Macy's. From there they would take a stroll through Central Park.

Her ruse had worked out perfectly. Making him feel that she needed his help and that things were not as soft for her as he had imagined was good psychology. And then she was also improving her mind. She called that a double-barrelled attack. If some one at that moment had whispered in her ear "Congratulations, Miss Brewster," she would have deemed it only proper and deserved.

She busied herself arranging the volumes which contained the legal wisdom of McCall and Watkins.

Victor Blackshaw pushed the door and entered. A neatly-clipped moustache plus an unmistakable squint saved him from appearing altogether prosaic. Approaching her desk he said familiarly, "Hello, Dodo, did you miss me? How about the usual tonight, a show and cabaret afterwards?"

He was totally unprepared for her answer. "Sorry, Vic, I'm frightfully busy tonight. I've got some reading to do." And she held up the green-jacketed book to him. It was "The Citadel." If someone had told Victor that dollar bills were being scooped up in the Avenue that very moment, it would have astonished him less. His dismay was ludicrous.

"Cut out the nonsense," he said abruptly. There's a good show at Radio City. I'll call for you at eight."

"No, Victor," explained Doris chlmly, "I mean it. Its time we all took our social responsibilities more serious. Do you? You don't. That's just the trouble. Nobody gives a single thought to what's happening about them. That's why we are all in this terrific mess. Breadlines and bonuses and everything. Moral cowardice. That's what it is." She finished off triumphantly. "You should read this book. It explains everything."

Victor Blackshaw felt something snap and go sick within him. Doris lecturing him on social responsibilities. Doris prating about breadlines and bonuses and the terrible mess we were in. It was all an incredible mistake. He pleaded with her.

"All right, Dodo, save the act for another time. Be ready for eight."

But Doris had that far away look in her eyes that said unmistakably that she was destined for higher things. Victor Blackshaw leaned against the desk weakly, an ineffable expression on his prosaic face. Dodo had never refused him a date, at Radio City. He felt himself in the presence of an inexplicable phenomenon and did what most people do in a situation like that. He hastily departed. If there was a conversion coming he did not want to sit in on its birth.

And now Doris had entered upon a new and exciting phase of her career. She was active in various societies, attended charitable functions and developed a social conscience by consorting with down-and-out hobos. Everything was so undeniably wrong, she insisted. Why hadn't she noticed it before? She threw herself into the front-line trenches of reform with an energy that astounded every one. Only to Myrna, faithful school chum and now fellow-member in her study circle, did she confide her reasons for the astounding change. The others had to grope their way conjecturally. Of one thing they were certain. Doris Brewster wasn't rehabilitating bums for the sheer love and pleasure of it. They suspected a man.

It was at a reading of Henrik Van Loon's "The Arts," "Come on, Doris. Tell us who he is," they coaxed. "You've kept us suspicious long enough."

Doris made a wry mouth but relented. "All right, girls, gather round. Here's the first complete edition." The books and note pads clattered to the floor with the noise of a stage hailstorm.

"Isobel was right," Doris began. "The wonder of evolution will never cease. There is definitely a new trend and I have met him. Fancy, my dears, walking through Central Park with a male and having him discourse on photosynthesis, anyway something like that, and why the colour of grass isn't violet but just plain green." She paused for a moment and then added slyly, significantly. "Until photosynthesis came along I never knew that my life had been so empty."

Isobel, a demure and diminutive brunette, was purring contentedly on the sofa. Her disciple's success was encouraging. She reflected that now the other girls would take their projects more seriously. She must have Mr. A. G. Kottrai give them a lecture on Ibsenism and the Modern Drama! She looked around, for her, belligerently. Any objections NOW?

Doris was still explaining the New Type. "I call him, Reformer. He's always finding something at fault and suggesting improvements. He's really got a wonderful mind, girls." Then it seemed that for no reason at all Doris stopped speaking. When she began again the words came slowly and as if charged with thought.

"But what puzzles me, girls, is that he's so utterly impersonal, so aloof." And as the group began laughing she held up her hand for quiet. It was evident she had a problem on her mind. "No... what I mean is, well, he's always talking about high and mighty things. You'd imagine he was unaware of his surroundings. It's uncanny. You sometimes think he had no brothers and sister or uncles and aunts. That he'd come into the world just as he is."

It was now that Isobel came forward with consoling words. "That's just one other characteristic of the new male. His impersonality. It's one of his most charming features, I believe." Then turning toward Doris. "Did you say you called him Reformer? How clever!"

After the lapse of another two weeks Doris felt that she hadn't made sufficient progress with Terry. Of course, he telephoned her faithfully, recommended improving books to read and occasionally asked her for walks through Central Park. Yet for the sacrifices she had made it was all very discouraging. She wondered whether he still maintained that silly prejudice against her because he thought she needed a few more knocks. It must be that, she told herself, since her conversation had improved noticeably and she could name all the Settlements in Manhattan. Well, she would have to be on the move again. Literally speaking.

She rang him up to tell him that she was changing her apartment. Neighbour trouble. Too much noise at night. Kept you from reading all those improving books. And would he help?

The muffled words in the receiver dissipated to a laugh. Then they re-formed and said clearly. "Of course I will. What time can you make it?"

She told him.

"Very well, don't give it a thought."

When the last valise had been carried up, Terry brushed his clothes carefully and lit his pipe.

"It's a cosy hide-out," he remarked. "Shows excellent taste."

The compliment made Doris purr.

"Do you think so, really? I don't know how to thank you, Reformer. I've been such a bother."

Terry Bartlett looked straight at her. His blue eyes expressed a deep concern. He took her small hand in his own and pressed it tenderly. "You poor kid, it's no bother at all. You've been up against it lately."

Doris experienced a spasm of remorse. He must never know that it had all been part of her game. Then it flashed through her mind. "Perhaps I've overplayed."

At that very moment the Reformer gave a short laugh. Doris looked up apprehensively. "I've just been thinking," said Terry. "Seems to me you ought to invest in a moving van. Or maybe sign a permanent contract with an express company."

Doris was re-assured. For a long terrible moment her heart had stopped beating. Had he guessed everything? She looked at him searchingly and their eyes met. No, the dear bunny was still... the dear, sweet bunny.

Terry walked to the door. "I must be going now. If I can be of any further help give me a call... Here, I'll shove this trunk aside." When that was done, he said, "How about visiting some second-hand bookshops with me? I promise you they're interesting."

Doris gave him her sweetest smile. "I'd love it, Terry. When can you make it?"

He calculated rapidly. "What about Saturday afternoon?"

She nodded. "It's a deal, Reformer."

Terry's hand was on the knob.

He turned around. "I'll pick my wife up at the library and call for you at three. Okay?"

Doris felt the blood drawing away from her cheeks. But she managed to support herself and say thinly. "I'd be delighted to meet her. Have you a cigarette, Terry?"

After the first few puffs she felt more composed. Her voice was neutral.

"It's something of a surprise to me. When were you married?"

He counted backwards on his fingers. "It was the night that I first helped you to move your things. Do you remember? Connie and I rushed to the minister afterwards."

Yes, Doris remembered. It had been the first strategic move on her chess-board. The surest way to the heart of a reformer. Now she felt inwardly limp and exhausted. So that was the New Type. The 1939 Special. A wife was too unimportant a detail to be mentioned. To

"CAMERA ON THE CAMPUS"

A SMART SERIES OF ROTOGRAVURE PICTURES OF MCGILL AT WORK AND PLAY

Don't miss tomorrow's rotogravure section of The Standard—you'll see an array of really interesting pictures of life on the McGill campus! (You might even see yourself in some of the photographs.) Students playing hockey... students at work in the classroom. You'll get a big chuckle when you see the actual photographs of the Arts versus Engineering battle.

Co-eds who took part in the Red and White revue will be particularly interested in the full-size picture of the entire chorus... a beautiful picture no matter how you look at it!

Every McGill student will want to see these pictures, so make a note NOW to order your copy of this week's Standard!

8 BIG SECTIONS

In addition to the McGill pictures, this week's Standard brings you eight big sections covering everything of interest! Here are a few of its features:

NEWS: The latest news from all parts of the world; also interpretation and comment by experts.

PICTURES: More news pictures than any other newspaper circulating in Canada. Pages of dramatic, interesting pictures.

FICTION: A complete book-length novel in every issue. This week "Strange Beauty" by Maysie Greig.

FUN: Complete Movie, Cabaret and Radio news is a big weekly feature of the Standard.

FASHION: Smart photographs and comments on all the latest style trends.

SPORT: Every week The Standard's sport pages bring you news and pictures of the sporting world.

COMICS: More famous comics than any other newspaper or magazine in Canada.

ROTOGRAVURE: The most up-to-date and smartest rotogravure section in Canada. This week's McGill pictures are a good indication.

riches, which was not the subject of the debate.

He illustrated his argument with the situation of Nazi Germany. He said that he refers to that country specifically because he is not a diplomat. According to him, the whole resolution is made up of a contradiction, of terms and is therefore invalid: "People cannot enjoy riches in a Hell, therefore they are not riches."

Berger Discusses Riches.
Berger, speaking on the affirmative side, said that there are two kinds of riches, those properly used, and those improperly used, the latter predominating.

He said that in the system we have in the world today, profit-making offers difficulties to the good man, temptation to the weak man, and opportunities to be bad to the bad man.

The first speaker of the affirmative had advised the negative side to be practical. When Bill MacNaughton stood up he said "We have heard from a Theologist, a Sociologist, and an Economist. Now we are going to be practical." He said that a gold mine is a hell made by those who seek gold.
